The Age.

MELBOURNE, MONDAY, 23rd October, 1871.

Thomas T. Roper, head master of the California Gully common school, was on Friday defendant to an action brought at the Sandhurst County Court for £200 damages for an assault. The action was brought by a girl about ten years of age named Ellen Matthews, in the name of her father and next friend; and the case for the plaintiff was briefly as follows:—On or about the 8th November, 1870, she was at the defendant's school, and in consequence of some trifling offence, she was ordered by Mrs. Malcolm, one of the assistant teachers and mother-in-law to Roper, to stand out and go to the master's desk to be punished. The defendant gave her four slaps on the palm of the hand with a cane, one or more of which struck her thumb, and injured it severely. The thumb was poulticed, and the girl continued to attend school till the end of the week, when she left. In a few weeks afterwards, the thumb not improving, she was taken to Dr. Boyd, who found that inflammation had set in, and that it was necessary to remove the first joint, which was done. For the loss of this and the consequent expense to which the parents were placed, damages were claimed. The court held that an unjustifiable assault had been committed, and granted the relief asked for to the amount of £25 with costs. Mr. Purves appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Martley for the defendant.
