June 23rd
I am writing to you to let you know I am still going strong. I have been working since I came to Melbourne at Tattersalls Club Stables but I am going away to the shearing on the 15th next month but before I go I wish to visit a friend of mine Joseph Keogh & I wish you to give me a special visit order. I called on you before this but I only get one half-day a week & that is Sunday. but I intend to have a day holiday before I go & will call & see you. I intend to try & look after Keogh when he is liberated. The two that I am looking after are still going strong King & Jordan Jordan is in N.S.W. & King is working in Melbourne painting he is going to shearing but is laid up with poisoned hand at present. If you can oblige in this matter I wish you to forward special visit order to the above address or to Tattersalls Club Stables 91 Exhibition St City.

Reformatory Prison,

Pentridge, 15th June 1914

Dear Percy

Just a line in reply to yours of the 14th hoping to find you well, as this leaves me at present Well. Old man I am looking forward to the 14th of next month. I know you will get the special visit from the Inspector General, alright, when he hears what you have to say in regard to my future prospects. If you go away to the shearing, I don't suppose you will be back again, till the latter end of November, Well, that is just about the time that I am going to try for my release, so that will be time enough for you to speak to the gentlemen I mentioned in my last letter, though I may not get any time off. I don't think I will do much over the 2 1/2 years, as my conduct has been excellent. I say old boy. I would like to see you in the top hat. I'll bet you look a marvel, yes, I wish I could see you. P.S. The top hat referred to is what I wear when dining carriages in living. P. Keogh.

J.H.K.

Percy I think it is very kind of you, to take an interest in me. I have never had too many friends perhaps it is my own fault: but when I get out, I will choose the right kind. & cut the old lot right out of my life.
Percy, I bought a nice frame for the Photo group. I will show it you, when you come out. you said your wife was not well. I am sorry to hear it, but I hope, she will soon recover. "Billy went to Queensland last Tuesday. I think he will get on alright.
When I read your letter to-day. I didn't wait to have my dinner. but rushed & had a shave & haircut. I fell down the stairs in a hurry, they all thought I was going out. I told them I was getting a special visit. They wanted to know if the Governor General was coming to see me, then I read the letter again, & found out, that you meant you were coming in July. But there's an excuse old chap I'm an Irishman. So now I must say good-bye. till I see you next month

POLICE TERRORS

BUCK AND RAMAGE

DEATH ENDS THEIR CAREER

Some years ago the names of two men—William Buck and Percy Ramage—were frequently before the public. They were a notorious pair, and veritable terrors to the police, for the sight of a man in the uniform of a constable was sufficient to transform them into a maniacal condition.

Each man was a study for the criminologist—Buck particularly so, for he was a man of educational attainments with a strange gift of Scriptural knowledge. He came from England as the black sheep of his family. Possibly he was banished to Australia like many sons of respectable people who found it impossible to reclaim them in their own land and trusted to a life amid different surroundings to bring about the desired reform. But Buck was incorrigible. He lived among dissolute people and in dissolute fashion, drinking, squabbling, bullying and fighting. His associates looked up to him as a man of learning, and so pandered to his vanity. This would send him out to drink, and when drunk he would wantonly attack the first policeman he met.

Ramage and Buck shared the discreditable reputation of being the two greatest police assailants of the time, and when either was being overpowered by the police it meant that some of the beats were undermanned while the operation was in progress, for it generally required the combined efforts of several constables to take either of the pair to the lock-up. On one occasion Buck and Ramage (whose correct name was Edwards) brutally attacked Constable J. Luke. The pair fought like maniacs. They were extraordinarily strong men, but Luke (who afterwards became a sergeant) behaved with the greatest courage until his assailants put him out of action in a cowardly manner. Ramage had a bottle of beer in his hands, and used it as a weapon on Luke's head. It inflicted a severe injury the effects of which the policeman felt for years. The encounter, however, checked the career of Buck as a blustering bully, for a splinter from the bottle struck him in one eye and destroyed the sight of it. Buck was tamed, and was heard of very seldom afterwards as a terror to the police. He died in tragic circumstances. While crossing a street in the city he was struck by a board which projected from a timber wagon, and succumbed to his injuries.

Sergeant Luke died a few months ago at Burnley; and one day last week Ramage also paid the debt of nature in the Melbourne Hospital. This man had been one of the class known as a human tiger, owing to the fierceness of his temper. His violence was not confined to street brawls, but in Pentridge he was a source of uneasiness to the prison officials, sharing with the negro King a reputation of being the most dangerous of the convicts ever ready to attack warders. There is a record of his savagery in this direction in Pentridge, where for a time it was thought that he was an irresponsible, and when he wrote a book dealing with his career this opinion was confirmed in the minds of many. But the warders were the best judges, and regarded him as a sane man. Ramage had lived for some years quietly since his last long term of imprisonment. His vicious mode of life told its tale, and he died from a complaint that usually shortens the lives of alcoholics.

A PRISONERS SANITY.

In consequence of repeated acts of violence committed by Percy Ramage since his removal to the Pentridge prison from the Yarra Bend Asylum, in 1902, and of doubts of the warders as to his sanity, application was made by the prisoner's relatives to have his mental condition ascertained. The Inspector-general of penal establishments accordingly directed the chief Government medical officer, in conjunction with the medical officer to the establishment, to furnish a report as to Ramage's sanity, with the result that the prisoner has been declared to be fully responsible for his riotous behaviour. Ramage, who at one time attempted to commit suicide by buffeting his head against the cell door, and who continues to give the authorities trouble, will therefore have to serve the full term of the additional punishment—quite three years (including 12 months in irons)—imposed by visiting justices for breaches of the regulations. The original sentence would have expired in January last.
