(Extract herewith.)

A pupil teacher has fallen into trouble at Stawell. The P. C. News writes:—"There is some probability that the practice which has for some time prevailed of purloining money and other articles from the clothes of the footballers which are left in the dressing room on the cricket reserve has at last been put a stop to. So much money has of late been lost that it was resolved to watch for the thief, and accordingly Detective Hartney on Saturday last stationed himself in the little room adjoining the one in which the clothes are kept. After waiting patiently for some time a young man named Thomas Murphy, a pupil teacher in the Patrick street State school, was observed to enter and rifle the pockets. After securing a small piece of tobacco from one of the recesses, he was surprised in his search, and left the room. After a lapse of some time he returned and resumed his operations, and at last drew from one of the pockets two half-crowns. Detective Hartney at once discovered himself, arrested Murphy, and at the close of the game conveyed him to the lock-up." Stawell Times 14th Feb. 1879.
