UNEXPECTED EVENT.

FINE MILITARY CAREER.

Major-General Sir John Hoad, chief of the general staff of the Commonwealth, died last night at his residence, "Ashens," Toorak-road. The event was unexpected. Sir John Hoad had been ailing for nearly a year; but for several weeks past his health had greatly improved, and he spoke frequently of late of an early return to his official duties. He was perfectly cheerful yesterday, but while sitting in his drawing-room at about 7 o'clock last evening he suddenly collapsed, and died within a few minutes. The immediate cause of death was heart failure.

Sir John Hoad was 56 years of age, having been born at Goulburn, New South Wales, in January, 1856. As a young man he was a Victorian State school teacher, but his ambition lay in other directions. He obtained a lieutenant's commission in the Mounted Rifles in 1884. He began his permanent military work as a staff officer in the Victorian Cadet Corps. In the same year he was made adjutant of the Mou. Rifles. He passed through successive ranks until in 1907 he became major-general. Sir John Hoad was a thoroughly-trained soldier. In 1890 and 1891 he attended various schools at Aldershot, Chatham, and Hythe.

In 1897 Major-General Hoad represented the headquarters staff of Victoria at the Queen's jubilee celebrations in London. While in England he was attached to the staff of Major-General Lord Methuen, and later he was attached to the personal staffs of Lord Roberts and of General the Duke of Connaught, commanding Aldershot district.

Major-General Hoad first saw active service in South Africa, being a member of the first Victorian contingent. In the earlier part of the war he was engaged in the operations around the Orange Free State, and after the relief of Kimberley he was associated with the Australian troops in actions near Johannesburg and Pretoria. Afterwards, in Cape Colony, he took part in the battle of Colesburg. It was for his services there that he received his first Imperial decoration. He was mentioned in despatches, and awarded the honour of Companion of St. Michael and St. George, and a medal and three clasps.

Upon returning to Victoria in 1900, Colonel Hoad took an active part in the administrative movements which preceded the assumption by the Commonwealth of the military forces of the States. He was in a measure responsible for the framing of the first Defence Act of Australia, in 1903, and he was then marked out as a soldier who would take a leading part in the military affairs of the Commonwealth. In 1904 he went as attache from the Commonwealth military forces with the Japanese army, then engaged in war against Russia in Manchuria. The Japanese Government awarded him a war medal, and he also received the decoration of the Rising Sun from the Emperor. Shortly after the close of the Russo-Japanese war and his return to Australia, Colonel Hoad became a brigadier-general, and in 1907, on the retirement of Major-General Finn, Sir John Hoad was elevated to that rank and to the office of inspector-general of the Commonwealth military forces. Two and a half years ago, upon the rearrangement of duties following Lord Kitchener's report on the defence of the Commonwealth, and the Amending Defence Act of 1909, Major-General Hoad became chief of the general staff, and occupied that position at the time of his death. On the occasion of the King's Coronation Major-General Hoad was created a knight commander of St. Michael and St. George.

Sir John Hoad was married in 1881, to a daughter of the late J. Dennistoun Brown, of Dumbarton.

While realising the great importance of theoretical instruction, Major-General Hoad was essentially a practical soldier. When he became an administrator he kept himself proficient in all the arts of war. He was a good shot, and an exceptionally clever rider. When he was in America, in 1904, he greatly astonished and impressed the military officers at Harvard by his horsemanship. An officer who could ride well was to them somewhat of a rarity, and when the Australian visitor schooled his horse over high fences their admiration knew no bounds.

THE FUNERAL.

The funeral will leave Sir John Hoad's late residence, Ashens, Toorak-road, for the St. Kilda Cemetery, at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The troops attending will form up at the Victoria Barracks at 2 o'clock.
