Died 16th u. September 1872.

We regret very much to have to record [illegible] Mr. H. Hennell, late teacher at North Rochford school. It will be re[illegible] about six weeks ago, the deceased gentleman left this neighborhood to proceed to Tarraville, near Port Albert, having received an appointment as teacher at the school at that place. He left here on the 10th of August, and the melancholy event of his decease took place on the 16th inst., after three days illness. The cause of death was that terrible scourge Diptheria, with which the unfortunate gentleman was seized, and to the ravages of which he quickly succumbed. During the time Mr. Hennell was in this locality he was highly respected as an able teacher and a really good neighbor, for which qualifications he gained many friends, who will regret the loss of their old companion very much. But a few days before his death, letters from him were received by friends in this locality, in which he spoke of his high hopes of future prosperity, and how much he liked the place in which he had cast his lot. Although such a short time at Tarraville, we learn he had secured the esteem of the residents of that locality, who regret his decease almost as much as do those with whom he has been associated for so much, longer a period. He has left a widow and four children to lament the untimely loss of him who was all in all to them, and to whose deep grief, that of others is but as a shadow.
