1918

The death occurred on July 1 of Mr. Donald Campbell, who arrived in Victoria [illegible] years ago, being then a boy of 15. He was in charge of the State school at Inverleigh for over [illegible] years, and at the recent jubilee celebrations of the town, by special invitation, he revisited the scene of his former labours, and presided at the jubilee [illegible]. After leaving Inverleigh he had charge of Amherst, and subsequently of Fairfield schools. Dr. Albert Campbell, of Melbourne, is a son of the deceased.

Considering his age and strength, he cannot reasonably be expected to take any active or continuous part in the teaching. He is no longer a keen and effective school manager: keeps too much to the office: is not able to move quickly from room to room, nor, when in the room, to detect matters that need attention. I did not see him give any assistance or practical suggestions to the teachers as he passed through the school. He overlooked entirely the necessity of rendering assistance of some kind to the three young teachers in charge of excessively large classes. | | | 1 6 91 30640H | Eddy: "Mr Willmott has only been in charge for a short time. With such an excellent staff, the school should not retrograde in any way. He appears to take an interest in his work, but he has not the necessary vigour to manage with marked success so large a school. |

| | | 6 2 92 92/4499 | Mr Holland: Not physically strong or active: seems to have been a very good teacher, and is still capable of giving a good lesson, although not quick in noticing inattention in remote children in his class. Considering his age and strength, he cannot reasonably be expected to take any active or continuous part in the teaching. He is no longer a keen and effective school manager: keeps too much to the office: is not able to move quickly from room to room, nor, when in the room, to detect matters that need attention. I did not see him give any assistance or practical suggestions to the teachers as he passed through the school. He overlooked entirely the necessity of rendering assistance of some kind to the three young teachers in charge of excessively large classes. I agree with the recommendation that Mr Willmott be superannuated. |
