A VETERAN STATE SCHOOL TEACHER.

The "age" of the mod. Aug. 1893

Yesterday afternoon the teachers and pupils of the King-street State school met and presented a handsome silver tea urn and massive silver inkstand to their late head teacher, Mr. R. A. Armstrong, who has retired after nearly 36 years' work. Mr. Armstrong entered the Government service in 1858, from which year until 1875 he had charge of St. Stephen's school, Richmond, being appointed by special preferment in 1875 to the Dana-street central school, Ballarat, with which he was connected until 1886, when he took charge of the school from the head mastership of which he has just retired on a pension. He has also been one of the associated training masters under the Education department for about 17 years. As a teacher Mr. Armstrong's prominent characteristic was earnestness, and by his kindly disposition and invariable consideration for those with whom he was brought into contact he endeared himself to his pupils, by whom he was always affectionately recognised as guide, philosopher and friend. There are many men holding prominent positions in the colony at the present time who owe their success in life to Mr. Armstrong's training and instruction in their youth, and these will assuredly be pleased to hear of their revered old mentor being still hale and hearty, and retiring from the service, after so many years of good work, happy in the possession of the respect and good wishes of all who know him. For many years the annual meetings and dinners of the Armstrong's Boys' Association testified to the affectionate regard in which Mr. Armstrong was held by his old pupils. He was a hearty supporter of legitimate outdoor sports during recreation hours, and by his example up to middle age he took pleasure in practically exemplifying the doctrine of mens sana in corpore sano.

At the presentation yesterday, Mr. Armstrong earnestly expressed his gratification at such a demonstration of goodwill, and in acknowledging the good feeling of his pupils, the hearty co-operation of the parents and the earnest support which he had received from his staff, hoped that the kindly feeling which had been shown to himself might be extended to his successor, Mr. G. H. Carter.
