Wangaratta Tyman 18 11 75 36520 H. Is a better teacher than manager - he confines himself & takes too much to his own particular classes 5th & 6th without exercising sufficient supervision over the rest of the school. S/y well drawn up and seems followed - classification on the whole correct - programme properly observed - fair progress made since last examination - the order of the school has improved

Tubbuddy 276 76/282 H appears to bestow a considerable amount of attention upon the teaching of his School but does not make his organization conduce to the maintenance of quiet and order - as a discipline-master he appears to be scarcely strict enough.

Mr. John Hill, who died at Surrey Hills on Sunday, was one of the few remaining teachers who served under the Denominational Board. Mr. Hill arrived in Portland by the ship John Davis in November, 1839, and after trying his fortune on the Castlemaine goldfields began teaching in 1854 in connection with the Church of England school, Portland. He remained in Portland as a teacher for many years, and was then transferred to St. Arnaud, and finally St. Kilda. He retired from the service in October, 1892. He leaves a widow and grown-up family. The funeral arrangements were interred in the St. Kilda cemetery yesterday.
